

NATIONAL EDUCATION SEMINAR

The Contracting Professional as a Risk Manager

In order to arm Contracts and Procurement professionals with a clear understanding of developing trends and changes within the Federal Contract/Procurement World, National Contract Management Association (NCMA) has established informational seminars. On February 21, 2001, NCMA will be sponsoring the National Education Seminar on The Contracting Professional as a Risk Manager.

Every aspect of business carries some degree of risk – one of your key responsibilities as a contracting professional is managing these risks to avoid situations that might jeopardize your contracts. NCMA's 2001 National Education Seminar shows you how to anticipate and control the financial, legal and performance risks that can impact the success of your contracts.

Learn how to identify potential risks, quantitatively analyze their impacts, and include the projected costs in your contract plan. Find out how to monitor contract performance to detect risk situations and how to mitigate the risk to minimize the impact.

Attendees will still receive Continuous Learning Points (CLP).

Seminar Speakers:

Neil Couture, CPCM, Director of Marketing and Member Services, National Contract Management Association (NCMAHQ).

Marlys Norby, CPCM, Sr. Contracts Manager, Information Dominance Group of Advanced Engineering & Sciences, ITT Industries, Inc.

Corey Rindner, CPCM, Director, Office of Procurement and Sr. Procurement Executive, Department of the Treasury.

The Seminar will be held:

Assembly Room at SAIC
1710 SAIC Drive
